COLD OPEN

1 INT. MONTY'S ON JACKSON - BAR - NIGHT
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 12:58 AM

Monty's is packed past capacity and nobody's leaving. Every eye is on the TV over the bar: USA Network, Arthur Ashe Stadium, three miles away in Flushing Meadows. U.S. Open men's quarterfinal. Fifth set. Tiebreak. JAMES BLAKE, the kid from Yonkers, against ANDRE AGASSI, the legend. Twenty-three thousand people on their feet on the screen. Forty people on their feet in the bar.

The interns hold a booth by the window. Raven (25) is standing on the seat. Arianna (25) pretends not to care and is shredding a napkin. Amond (26), with a club soda, is explaining the tiebreak rules to nobody. Harmony (26) sits at the end of the booth.

At the bar, close together on two stools, sit Marc (26) and Esther (25). Her hand is on his knee. His arm is on the back of her stool. Anybody with eyes can see it.

MONTY
(behind the bar, to the room)
Nobody breathe. Nobody order. Nobody DO anything.

RAVEN
(screaming at the TV)
COME ON, JAMES! YONKERS! YONKERS!

AMOND
He can't hear you. He's three miles away and inside a stadium.

RAVEN
HE CAN FEEL IT, AMOND.

On the TV, Agassi rips a forehand down the line. Match point. The stadium erupts. So does Monty's: half in agony, half in awe.

USA ANNOUNCER (V.O.)
(on TV)
...Agassi, at thirty-five years old, comes back from two sets down! Seven-six in the fifth! One of the greatest matches this stadium has ever seen!

Groans. Applause. Arianna throws her shredded napkin at the TV.

ARIANNA
Two sets UP. He was two sets up.

MARC
(turning on his stool, grinning)
Blake's coming back. Mark my words. Next year. He's twenty-five. He's got a whole career.

ESTHER
(smiling at him)
You say that about everybody.

MARC
Because it's true about everybody.

Harmony watches them from the booth. Her hand drifts to her scrub-jacket pocket. The letter, still folded inside. She takes her hand away.

Esther's RAZR buzzes on the bar. She glances at it. A text from a 617 number. She turns it face down, fast.

MARC
Who's texting you at one in the morning?

ESTHER
(beat)
Marc. Tomorrow. Before work. Can I... (beat) There's something I have to tell you. The Boston thing. I have to tell you tomorrow.

MARC
(gently)
Later can still be later.

ESTHER
(very seriously)
No. It can't. Not anymore. (beat) Tomorrow.

Something in her voice makes him look at her properly. He nods.

MARC
Tomorrow.

MARC (V.O.)
Everybody lies.

2 EXT. JACKSON AVENUE - NIGHT
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 1:21 AM

The interns spill onto the sidewalk under the 7 train, still arguing about the tiebreak. Marc and Esther walk ahead, his arm around her. Harmony and Raven walk behind them.

RAVEN
(low, to Harmony)
That's ten nights. He's slept at that boat ten nights out of ten. (beat) Harmony. You okay?

HARMONY
(bright, too bright)
I'm great. I'm happy for them. Aren't you happy for them?

RAVEN
(looking at her)
...Sure.

Ahead of them, Esther looks at her phone one more time under a streetlight. We see the text:

SMS, from 617-555-0144: "Still on for 4:15 JFK. Can't wait to see you. Big news. -C"

She snaps the phone shut.

MARC (V.O.)
We lie to our patients to keep them calm. We lie to our families to keep them out of it. We lie to ourselves because the truth needs a bigger room than we've got.

MARC (V.O.)
And every lie is a loan. Sooner or later, somebody comes to collect.

END OF COLD OPEN

ACT ONE

3 INT. THE HOUSE ON 49TH AVENUE - KITCHEN - MORNING
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 5:22 AM

Harmony at the stove, scrambling eggs. Raven at the island, eating cereal out of the box. The front door opens: Marc, in yesterday's clothes, with a bag of bagels.

RAVEN
(not looking up)
The prodigal roommate.

MARC
I brought bagels.

RAVEN
From the boat?

MARC
From the place on Vernon. The boat doesn't have bagels.

RAVEN
(taking one)
The boat doesn't have a lot of things. A shower, for example. (sniffing) You smell like Flushing Bay.

Harmony puts a plate of eggs in front of Marc without a word. He looks up.

MARC
Double-O. Thank you. (beat) Your dad's X-ray. That was Tuesday, right? Did they read it?

HARMONY
(back to the stove)
Results today. I'm picking them up from Pulmonary at noon.

MARC
You want me to come?

HARMONY
(beat)
No. (beat, softer) No, thank you. You have... (she gestures vaguely: the boat, Esther, all of it) ...a lot going on.

Marc looks at her back for a moment. Raven watches both of them.

MARC
Harmony. If you ever need me, I'm right here. You know that, right?

HARMONY
(turning off the stove)
I know where you are, Marc.

She takes her plate and goes upstairs. Marc looks at Raven.

MARC
What did I do?

RAVEN
(eating a bagel, sighing)
For a genius, you're really dumb, Bullock.

4 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - THE BOARD - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:00 AM

Elxa (28), at seventeen and a half weeks, now unmistakably pregnant, stands at the Board with a marker. Taped to the middle of it, right over the OR schedule, is a printout of a blog post: QueensGraceConfidential. Headline in 24-point bold: "DR. X AND BOSTON: CONFIRMED."

The interns arrive and stop dead. Esther sees it and goes pale. Marc sees it and laughs, then sees her face and stops laughing.

ELXA
(ripping it off the Board, balling it up)
Whoever put this here: I'm pregnant, not blind. (she drops it in the trash) Assignments. (beat) Smilley: the Chief's old service. Labor and Delivery. Mrs. Price, twenty weeks, twins, twin-to-twin transfusion. The Chief wants an intern on that patient all day, and she asked for you by name.

ESTHER
(surprised)
Me? I'm on neuro.

ELXA
Not today. (beat) Baker: Dr. Bullock, Senior. Lemieux is still waiting on a heart.

AMOND
(stiffly)
I'm aware.

Amond shifts his weight. A tiny wince. Nobody notices but Arianna.

ELXA
Cummings: Gloria's pit. Divine: Lowery, then Pulmonary at noon, I know. (beat) Bullock, Ellison: my trauma service, with me. (beat) And Bullock?

MARC
Yes?

ELXA
(beat, low)
The Chief wants to see you in her office at six-twenty. (glancing at Esther) Both of you.

Esther and Marc look at each other.

5 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - CHIEF'S OFFICE - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:20 AM

BERNADETTE "BERNIE" WATKINS (55), Natasha's executive assistant, ushers Marc and Esther in and closes the door behind them with a look of profound sympathy. Natasha (47) sits behind her desk. Two forms sit on the blotter in front of her.

NATASHA
Dr. Bullock. Dr. Smilley. Sit.

They sit. Natasha slides the forms across.

NATASHA
Queens Grace Hospital Policy 4.12. Consensual relationships between members of the medical staff must be disclosed to Human Resources when the two parties work on the same service or one supervises the other. (beat) It's not a punishment. It's a protection. For you, and for your patients.

MARC
(beat)
Mama... Chief. Is this because of the blog?

NATASHA
It's because I'm not blind either, Dr. Bullock. You've been walking in with the same coffee for ten days. (beat) Full disclosure. Both forms. Signed. On Bernie's desk by end of shift.

Esther looks at the form. A line near the bottom: "Marital status of each party:" with boxes. SINGLE. MARRIED. SEPARATED. DIVORCED. Her hand tightens on the pen.

NATASHA
(noticing nothing, or almost nothing)
Dr. Smilley, you'll be on Labor and Delivery with me today. You did well on OB at Harvard; I read your file. (beat) My twins in Room 3 have Stage III twin-to-twin transfusion. Nobody in Queens does laser ablation. So I recruited a fetal surgeon from Boston. Fellowship in Leuven, trained with Deprest himself. He lands at JFK this afternoon and starts tonight.

ESTHER
From Boston.

NATASHA
(already standing)
The best in the country. We're lucky to have him. (beat) Go. Room 3. I'll be right behind you.

Esther stands, the form clutched in her hand. Marc watches her go, puzzled. Natasha watches Marc.

NATASHA
(once the door closes, softer)
She's lovely, Marc-Anthony.

MARC
(beat)
I know.

NATASHA
(beat)
You told her about your grandfather. She's told you about Boston?

MARC
(beat)
She's going to. Today.

Natasha holds his eyes a second longer than she means to.

NATASHA
Good. (beat) Sign the form.

6 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - LABOR AND DELIVERY - ROOM 3 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:41 AM

YOLANDA PRICE (31), a kindergarten teacher, lies on her side, enormously and unevenly pregnant for twenty weeks, short of breath. Her husband, FDNY FIREFIGHTER DARNELL PRICE (33), still sunburned and wearing an "FDNY - LADDER 115" T-shirt, holds her hand. Esther runs an ultrasound probe over her belly. Natasha watches the screen.

ESTHER
(reading the screen)
Twin A, the recipient, has polyhydramnios. Deepest pocket is eleven centimeters. Bladder's big. Twin B, the donor... (she moves the probe) ...is stuck. No visible fluid. Can't see a bladder.

NATASHA Dopplers?

ESTHER
Absent end-diastolic flow in the donor's umbilical artery.

NATASHA
(to Yolanda, gently)
Stage III. Mrs. Price, your babies share one placenta, and the blood vessels between them are unbalanced. One baby is giving away too much blood, the other is getting too much. Without treatment, at this stage, we lose both of them most of the time.

YOLANDA
(holding her belly)
Most of the time.

NATASHA
There's a procedure. A surgeon goes in with a tiny camera, finds the connecting vessels on the placenta and seals them with a laser. In the European trial, it saved at least one baby about three times out of four. (beat) The surgeon who does it is landing at JFK at four-fifteen this afternoon.

DARNELL
(quiet)
Four-fifteen. (beat) I got back from New Orleans last night. Ten days. We pulled people off roofs in the Seventh Ward. (beat) I kept thinking, I gotta get home before something happens. And I got home and this happened.

NATASHA
Until he gets here, we're going to drain some of the extra fluid. That will make you more comfortable and buy time. (beat) Dr. Smilley will be with you all day. Every minute.

Yolanda looks at Esther.

(trying to smile)
You look scared, Dr. Smilley.

ESTHER
(beat)
I'm not scared of your babies, Mrs. Price. (beat) I'm scared of something else. It has nothing to do with you.

YOLANDA
(beat)
Is it a man?

Esther laughs, despite herself. Darnell grins.

ESTHER
(beat)
It's always a man, isn't it.

7 INT. PELL PAVILION - THE PIT - TRAUMA 1 AND 2 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:58 AM

The doors bang open. LT. TEE ROLLINS (29) and ANDRE FONTAINE roll in two stretchers, one after the other.

TEE
First one: Vivian Cole, forty-one, restrained driver, Lexus versus the BQE retaining wall at the Kosciuszko Bridge ramp. Seatbelt sign. Tachy, belly's tender, pressure ninety over sixty. (beat) Second: male, thirty-four, passenger, unrestrained, went into the dash. Deformed right femur, chest wall tenderness. Name's Jamal Reid.

Elxa, Marc and Raven split, Elxa and Marc to Trauma 1, Raven to Trauma 2. Kendra and a TRAUMA NURSE work around them.

VIVIAN COLE (41), elegant even with glass in her hair, grabs Marc's wrist as he cuts her blouse.

VIVIAN
(urgent, whispering)
Please. My husband is coming. Please. Don't tell him there was somebody in the car.

MARC
Ma'am, I need you to lie still. Do you have pain in your belly?

VIVIAN
(gripping harder)
Did you hear me? Don't tell Leonard.

ELXA
(doing a FAST exam, eyes on the ultrasound)
Free fluid in Morison's pouch and around the spleen. (beat) She's going upstairs. Call OR Four. (to Vivian) Mrs. Cole, you're bleeding inside, probably from your spleen. We need to operate right now.

JAMAL
(to Raven, through his teeth)
Is she okay? Vivian? Is she okay?

RAVEN
She's going to surgery. Are you family?

JAMAL
(beat)
No. (beat) I'm her... I work with her. At the firm. I was getting a ride.

Raven looks across at Marc. Marc looks back. They both know.

8 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - CARDIAC CARE UNIT - BED 6 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 7:15 AM

Curtis Lemieux (44), on his LVAD, ten days post-op, sits up eating oatmeal. His color is good. His trombone case is open on the windowsill. Amond checks the HeartMate's console: flow 5.3. He straightens up, and as he does, his hand goes to his right lower abdomen. A quick, tight wince.

CURTIS
(watching him)
You hurt, baby doctor?

AMOND
(dropping his hand)
No.

CURTIS
You hold your side like my brother did when his appendix was going bad.

AMOND
(flat)
I pulled a muscle. At the gym.

CURTIS
(dry)
You go to the gym?

Before Amond can answer, his pager goes off. Then the room phone rings. Robert appears in the doorway with his own pager in his hand, already pulling on his jacket.

ROBERT
(to Curtis, a slight smile)
Mr. Lemieux. How would you feel about a heart today?

Curtis freezes, spoon in midair.

CURTIS
(barely)
Today?

ROBERT
The New York Organ Donor Network just called. A donor at Staten Island University Hospital. Blood type O, the right size, a good match. (beat) Dr. Baker and I are going to drive over the Verrazano, look at it with our own eyes and, if it's good, bring it back to you.

Curtis puts down the spoon. His hands are shaking.

CURTIS
(quiet)
Who was it?

ROBERT
(gently)
I can't tell you that. (beat) Somebody's family said yes this morning, on the worst day of their lives.

ROBERT
(to Amond)
Dr. Baker. Get your coat. We're going on a heart run.

Amond nods, grabs his jacket and follows. At the door he stops for one second, one hand on the frame, white-knuckled, then keeps going.

9 INT. PELL PAVILION - THE PIT - BAY 5 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 7:42 AM

DORIAN BATISTE (8), a skinny boy in a donated Astros T-shirt three sizes too big, lies on the gurney breathing fast and deep, with fruity breath and sunken eyes. Gloria hangs fluids. Arianna reads the labs. His aunt, ROCHELLE BATISTE (39), a home health aide in Cambria Heights, holds a plastic Walmart bag of his belongings.

ARIANNA
(reading)
Glucose six-forty. pH seven point oh-eight. Bicarb six. Anion gap twenty-eight. (to Gloria) DKA. Severe. Start the insulin drip at point one per kilo per hour, after the first liter of fluid.

GLORIA
(already doing it)
Already hung, Doctor.

ARIANNA
(to Rochelle)
Ms. Batiste. Does Dorian have type 1 diabetes?

ROCHELLE
(nodding, exhausted)
Since he was five. (beat) He's my sister's boy. From Gentilly. The water took their house. They were three days at the Superdome and two days at the Astrodome. My sister's still in Houston looking for her husband. They flew Dorian up to me on Sunday. (beat) His insulin floated away with everything else. The Red Cross gave him a shot in Houston. I been trying to get a prescription since Monday. Nobody would see him without his records, and his records are under eight feet of water.

Arianna stops writing.

ARIANNA
(quiet)
Since Monday.

ROCHELLE
Medicaid's in Louisiana. The clinic said call Louisiana. Louisiana don't answer the phone. (beat) Then this morning he wouldn't wake up right.

Dorian opens his eyes. Looks at Arianna.

DORIAN
(weak)
Are you a doctor?

ARIANNA
I'm a doctor.

DORIAN
(beat)
Did they find my dog? His name is Beignet. He's brown. (beat) They wouldn't let him on the bus.

Arianna looks at Gloria. Gloria looks at the ceiling.

ARIANNA
(sitting on the edge of the gurney)
Not yet, Dorian. (beat) Tell me about Beignet.

10 INT. PELL PAVILION - THE PIT - NURSES' STATION - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 8:22 AM

LEONARD COLE (45), a tall, buttoned-down accountant in a Brooks Brothers suit, with a deacon's pin on his lapel, strides up to the station. Raven is writing an order.

LEONARD
(polite, controlled)
My wife. Vivian Cole. The police called me. Car accident.

RAVEN
(standing)
Mr. Cole. She's in surgery. Her spleen was bleeding. Dr. Elxa Bullock is operating. She's stable.

LEONARD
(exhaling)
Thank God. (beat) Thank God. (beat) The officer said the BQE. She was supposed to be at the Hilton in Stamford for a conference until tonight. What was she doing on the BQE at six in the morning?

RAVEN
(beat)
I don't know, sir.

LEONARD
(beat)
Was she alone?

Raven hesitates. Across the station, Marc, coming back from the OR board, stops and listens.

RAVEN
(beat)
Yes, sir. She was alone.

Leonard nods slowly. He looks relieved. Then his eyes drift past Raven to the open curtain of Trauma 2, where an orthopedic resident is splinting Jamal Reid's leg. And on the counter beside the gurney, in a clear plastic belongings bag, is a man's leather briefcase with a monogram. Under it sits a woman's silk scarf, Hermès, orange.

Leonard looks at the scarf for a very long moment.

LEONARD
(quiet)
That's my wife's scarf. (beat) I bought her that scarf in Paris. For our tenth anniversary.

Raven closes her eyes.

LEONARD
(to Raven, very calm)
Then who's the man in that bed?

END OF ACT ONE

ACT TWO

11 INT. PELL PAVILION - THE PIT - TRAUMA 2 - CONTINUOUS
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 8:23 AM

Leonard walks into Trauma 2. Calm. Too calm. Jamal, his leg in a traction splint, sees him coming and goes gray. The orthopedic resident looks up, confused.

LEONARD
(pleasantly)
Mr. Reid, is it?

JAMAL
(beat)
Mr. Cole. I...

LEONARD
You were in my car. With my wife. At six in the morning. When she was supposed to be in Stamford.

Leonard takes one step closer to the bed. Then another. His hands are at his sides, but they're shaking.

Marc steps between them. Not fast. Not loud. He just puts six-foot-five of himself there, his hands open and down. A wall.

MARC
(quiet, even)
Mr. Cole. (beat) Not here. Not like this.

LEONARD
(not looking at Marc, looking past him)
Who are you to my wife?

JAMAL
(beat, defeated)
Ask her.

Leonard flinches like he's been hit. Marc doesn't move.

MARC
(still even)
Mr. Cole. Your wife is going to wake up in about an hour. She'll be able to answer every question you have. (beat) This man has a broken femur and can't stand up. If you do something right now, you'll be the one in the back of a police car, and she'll wake up alone. (beat) I don't think that's what you want.

A long, long beat. Raven watches from the doorway, barely breathing. Then Leonard steps back.

LEONARD
(to Marc, very quietly)
Where's your chapel?

MARC
First floor. Past the gift shop. (beat) It's open all night.

Leonard leaves. Marc lets out a breath. His hands are perfectly steady. Raven stares at him.

RAVEN
(low)
Three weeks ago you'd have...

MARC
(low)
I know what I'd have done three weeks ago.

12 INT. PELL PAVILION - THE PIT - SUPPLY ROOM - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 8:31 AM

Raven pulls Marc into the supply room and shuts the door.

RAVEN
Don't look at me like that.

MARC
I'm not looking at you like anything.

RAVEN
You're looking at me like I lied to that man.

MARC
(beat)
You did lie to that man.

RAVEN
She asked me to! She was scared and bleeding, and she grabbed my hand, and she...

MARC
She grabbed my hand too, Rave. (beat) Lies don't stay small. They just wait for somebody to find a scarf.

Raven folds her arms. Something in her face changes. She steps closer.

RAVEN
(quiet)
You want to talk about lies, Bullock? (beat) I live with you. I see your mail. I see the man in the suit who drops off envelopes and won't come inside. I see you take phone calls on the back porch and say "Yes, sir" to somebody who isn't your daddy, because I've heard you talk to your daddy. (beat) You lie about something every day. I just don't know what.

Marc doesn't answer. He can't.

RAVEN
(beat, softer)
I'm not mad. I'm just saying. Don't stand up in my face on a high horse when you've got your own barn. (she opens the door) And Harmony. You're lying to yourself about Harmony too.

MARC
(confused)
What about Harmony?

RAVEN
(walking out, over her shoulder)
Genius. Dumb.

13 INT. HOSPITAL SUV - VERRAZANO-NARROWS BRIDGE - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 8:52 AM

A black Queens Grace SUV crosses the upper deck of the bridge toward Staten Island. Below, the Narrows glitters in the September sun. An ORGAN PROCUREMENT COORDINATOR rides up front beside the DRIVER. In the back: Robert, reading the donor chart, and Amond, staring out the window, sweating slightly despite the air conditioning.

ROBERT
(reading)
Nineteen. Motorcycle versus a bus on Hylan Boulevard, Tuesday night. Brain death declared at four this morning. Echo shows normal function, ejection fraction sixty percent. No arrests. Minimal pressors. (beat) It's a good heart, Dr. Baker.

AMOND
(staring out the window)
He was nineteen.

ROBERT
(looking up)
Yes.

A beat. Amond shifts in his seat and winces. Robert notices this time.

ROBERT
You're sweating.

AMOND
It's warm.

ROBERT
(beat)
It's sixty-eight degrees in this car.

Amond doesn't answer. Robert lets it go. For now.

AMOND
(finally)
I asked my mother. Where my father's buried. (beat) Like I said I would.

ROBERT
(closing the chart)
And?

AMOND
Inglewood Park Cemetery. Section F. (beat) She'd assumed I knew. I was nine at the funeral. I don't remember the funeral. I remember the car. (beat) Seventeen years, and I never once asked.

ROBERT
(quiet)
Are you going to go?

AMOND
I don't know. Christmas, maybe. But Christmas is a heavy call night.

ROBERT
(looking back at his chart)
I'll cover your Christmas.

AMOND
(turning)
You're the Chief of Cardiothoracic Surgery. You don't take intern call.

ROBERT
(not looking up)
I'll make an exception. (beat) Go see your father, Dr. Baker.

14 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - OR 4 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 9:10 AM

Vivian Cole on the table, her belly open. Elxa operating. Marc first-assisting. The ruptured spleen is out and sits in a basin, dark and shattered.

ELXA
(working)
Hilum's tied off. Irrigate. (beat) So. Policy 4.12.

MARC
(irrigating)
You knew she was going to make us fill out forms.

ELXA
I heard her tell Bernie at six this morning to print two copies. (beat) I filled one out in 2003.

MARC
For Russell? Russell teaches chemistry at Jamaica High. He's not on staff.

ELXA
(beat)
Not for Russell. (beat) Before Russell. There was a resident. It lasted four months. He's in Atlanta now. (beat) Mama never said a word about it. She just put the form in a drawer.

Marc looks at his sister over his mask. He didn't know.

ELXA
Everybody in this family has a drawer, Marc. (beat) Suction.

MARC
(suctioning)
Esther says she has something to tell me. About Boston. She says it can't wait.

ELXA
(beat)
Then let her tell you. (beat) And whatever it is, don't decide what you feel about it in the first five minutes. Bullocks are terrible in the first five minutes.

MARC
(dry)
I've noticed.

ELXA
(beat)
No bleeding. Close. (beat) You're doing the fascia. I'm going to sit down. Your niece or nephew is standing on my bladder.

15 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - LABOR AND DELIVERY - ROOM 3 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 9:48 AM

A long needle in Yolanda's belly under ultrasound guidance. Tubing runs to a big glass vacuum bottle that's filling with straw-colored amniotic fluid. Natasha guides the needle. Esther holds the probe. Darnell sits by Yolanda's head, holding her hand and looking anywhere but the needle.

NATASHA
Two thousand three hundred cc's. (beat) How's your breathing, Mrs. Price?

YOLANDA
(taking a deep breath, surprised)
Better. Oh my God. I can breathe.

NATASHA
That buys us time. It doesn't fix anything. (to Esther) The donor?

ESTHER
(watching the screen)
Still stuck. Still no bladder.

NATASHA
(withdrawing the needle)
Then we wait for the laser.

Natasha strips off her gloves. Esther takes a breath. Now or never.

ESTHER
Dr. Donohue. The surgeon from Boston. What's his...

The door opens. Bernie, with a cordless phone.

BERNIE
Dr. Donohue. I'm sorry. It's the Governor's office. They want to know how many Katrina evacuees Queens Grace can absorb this weekend. They're holding.

NATASHA
(already moving)
Tell them a hundred and fifty, and that I'll need Medicaid waivers in writing. (to Esther, at the door) Stay with her, Dr. Smilley. Every minute.

She's gone. Esther stands with the question unasked.

YOLANDA
(watching her)
The man. The one you're scared of. (beat) He's the doctor, isn't he?

Esther turns. Yolanda is a kindergarten teacher. She's seen every face a liar can make.

ESTHER
(quietly)
I don't know yet.

16 INT. PELL PAVILION - THE PIT - BAY 5 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 10:20 AM

Dorian, on the insulin drip, breathing more easily, his eyes clearer. Arianna sits beside him with a hospital laptop open on the tray table. Rochelle is asleep in the chair.

DORIAN
(pointing at the screen)
What's that?

ARIANNA
Petfinder dot com. They made a list for animals rescued from the hurricane. People post pictures. Shelters post pictures. (beat) The Louisiana SPCA took hundreds of dogs to a place in Gonzales.

DORIAN
(sitting up)
Is Beignet there?

Arianna hesitates. The easy answer is right there.

ARIANNA
(beat)
I don't know, Dorian. (beat) I'm going to be honest with you, because somebody should be. There are thousands of dogs. Some of them are on this list. Some of them got out and nobody's found them yet. And some of them... (beat) didn't make it.

Dorian's lip trembles. Gloria, passing by with a chart, stops and listens.

ARIANNA
But I'm going to look. Every single picture. Tonight, after my shift. And if he's on there, I'll find him. (beat) That's the only promise I can make that I know I can keep.

DORIAN
(beat)
My mama says "it's going to be fine." Every day. On the phone.

ARIANNA
(gently)
Your mama loves you. Sometimes people say "it's going to be fine" because they love you.

DORIAN
(looking at her)
Do you think it's going to be fine?

ARIANNA
(beat)
I think you're going to be fine. (beat) The dog, I'm going to look.

Dorian considers this. Then nods, satisfied in a way he hasn't been all week.

DORIAN
He's got a white spot. On his chest. Like a star.

ARIANNA
(typing)
White spot. Like a star.

Gloria walks on, smiling.

17 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - STAIRWELL C - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 10:44 AM

Esther, alone on the landing, types on her RAZR. Her thumbs are shaking.

SMS, to MARC: "roof. 3pm. please. i need 10 minutes. its important"

She sends it. Then she scrolls up to the other thread. The 617 number. She types.

SMS, to 617-555-0144: "dont come to the hospital. please. call me when you land and we'll talk"

She looks at it. Her thumb hovers. She deletes it, letter by letter. She types again.

SMS, to 617-555-0144: "we need to talk"

She sends that. A reply comes almost instantly.

SMS, from 617-555-0144: "Yes we do. Boarding at 2:30. -C"

Esther leans her head back against the cinderblock wall and closes her eyes.

18 INT. STATEN ISLAND UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL - OR 6 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 11:30 AM

A different hospital. Different tiles. A donor on the table, a nineteen-year-old with a tattoo of his mother's name across his collarbone. Several teams work at once: kidneys, liver, lungs. Robert and Amond stand at the chest. The heart beats in the open chest, pink and strong and young.

ROBERT
(quiet, reverent)
Look at that, Dr. Baker.

AMOND
(staring)
It's perfect.

ROBERT
(beat)
Remember this one. You'll see a thousand hearts. You'll remember the first one you took home.

OPO COORDINATOR
(at the wall)
Cross-clamp in sixty seconds, Dr. Bullock.

Robert nods. Amond looks at the tattoo: "DENISE."

AMOND
Thank you, Denise.

Robert glances at him. Says nothing.

ROBERT
Cross-clamp. Cardioplegia.

The heart slows. Stops. Robert excises it with fast, sure, practiced cuts and lifts it out. He places it in a basin of cold solution, then into three nested sterile bags. Amond holds out the cooler.

ROBERT
(handing it to him)
You carry it.

Amond takes the bags in his gloved hands. He holds the heart for a second, the weight of it, before he lowers it into the ice.

OPO COORDINATOR
Cross-clamp at eleven thirty-four. Clock's running.

ROBERT
Four hours, Dr. Baker. Let's go give a man a heart.

19 INT. STATEN ISLAND UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL - SCRUB ROOM - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 11:41 AM

Robert has gone ahead with the coordinator. Amond is alone at the sink, the cooler at his feet. He grips the edge of the steel sink with both hands. His face is gray. Sweat runs down his neck. He presses his fist into his right side and breathes through it: in, out.

Ten seconds. Twenty. It passes.

He straightens up, splashes water on his face and looks at himself in the mirror.

AMOND
(to his reflection, flat)
Not today.

He picks up the cooler and walks out.

END OF ACT TWO

ACT THREE

20 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - PULMONARY CLINIC - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 12:05 PM

A small consult room. A chest X-ray glows on the light box: Howard Divine's lungs. DR. KENNETH MABRY (55), pulmonologist, gray goatee, points with a pen. Harmony stands beside him in her white coat.

DR. MABRY
Heart size normal. No pneumonia. No effusion. Lungs mostly clear. (he taps a spot high on the right) Except there. Six millimeters. Right upper lobe. Noncalcified.

HARMONY
(leaning in)
A nodule.

DR. MABRY
A nodule. (beat) Most nodules that size in a fifty-five-year-old are nothing. Old granulomas. Scars. (beat) Does he smoke?

HARMONY
He quit in 1989. When I was ten. He smoked Kools for twenty years.

DR. MABRY
(writing)
Then I want a CT of the chest in three months. December. It's probably nothing. But "probably" isn't a word I like to bet with on a former smoker.

HARMONY
(beat)
And the cough?

DR. MABRY
Could be postnasal drip. Could be reflux. Could be thirty-one years of breathing bus exhaust. (beat) The CT will tell us. December.

Harmony nods. She writes on her palm: "CT - DEC." She looks at the little white spot for a long moment.

21 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - DOCTORS' LOUNGE - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 12:14 PM

Harmony at the wall phone.

HARMONY
(into the phone)
Daddy. It's a little spot. Six millimeters. They want a CT in December.

HOWARD (V.O.)
(on the phone, relieved, booming)
A little spot! See? I told you. Nothing. Your mama's had me dead and buried since July. (coughing) Lil! It's nothing!

HARMONY
Daddy, it's not "nothing." It's "probably nothing." That's different. You need the CT. December.

HOWARD (V.O.)
(laughing)
December. Christmas. I'll get a CT for Christmas. (beat) Double-O. Thank you, baby. For pushing.

Harmony smiles. A real one.

HARMONY
(quietly)
I love you, Daddy.

HOWARD (V.O.)
Love you too. (coughing) Now go save somebody.

Click. Harmony hangs up. She looks at her palm: "CT - DEC." She means to put it in her planner. She will forget, for a while. Everybody does.

22 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - SURGICAL RECOVERY - BAY 2 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 12:40 PM

Vivian, awake, groggy, a nasal cannula in her nose. Leonard sits in the chair beside her, his suit jacket folded on his lap, his deacon's pin gone. Raven stands at the foot of the bed checking the drains. She makes to leave.

LEONARD
(without looking at Raven)
Stay, Doctor. Please. (beat) I'd like a witness.

Raven stays. Vivian looks at her husband.

(hoarse)
Leonard.

LEONARD
(calm)
Vivian. I'm going to ask you one time. And I'd like the truth.

A long silence. Vivian's eyes fill.

VIVIAN
(barely audible)
Two years. (beat) He's an associate at the firm. It started at the Christmas party. (beat) I'm so sorry.

Leonard nods slowly. He doesn't yell. He doesn't cry.

LEONARD
(quiet)
I know.

VIVIAN
(stunned)
You... know?

LEONARD
(beat)
Since Easter. Your BlackBerry. You left it on the kitchen counter. (beat) I'm an accountant, Viv. I reconcile things. Your Stamford conferences didn't reconcile.

VIVIAN
(crying)
Then why didn't you say anything?

LEONARD
(beat)
Because I wanted you to tell me. (beat) Eleven years. I wanted to be married to somebody who would tell me. (beat) I prayed on it every Sunday. I sat in the front pew and prayed that one day you'd come to me and say it, so I wouldn't have to be the one who found out.

Vivian sobs. Leonard looks at his hands.

LEONARD
(quiet)
And you never did. You crashed into a wall instead. (beat) That's what lying does, Viv. Sooner or later it finds a wall.

Raven stands frozen at the foot of the bed. She lied to this man six hours ago.

23 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - OR 2 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 2:38 PM

Curtis's chest is open. His old heart is gone: a huge, flabby thing in a basin on the back table, with the LVAD's titanium pump beside it. In its place, sewn in, still and pale and cold, sits the new heart. Robert ties the last stitch on the pulmonary artery. Amond assists.

ROBERT
Pulmonary artery's done. (beat) Ischemic time?

PERFUSIONIST
Three hours and four minutes.

ROBERT
(glancing at Amond)
Dr. Baker. Release the cross-clamp.

Amond looks at him. Then he reaches into the field and opens the clamp on the aorta. Warm blood rushes into the coronary arteries of the cold, still heart.

Nothing. One second. Two. Three. Everyone watches.

Then: a quiver. A twitch. The heart pinks up from the base, a flush of color spreading over it like dawn. It shudders. Fibrillates. Robert holds out his hand and the internal paddles are in it.

ROBERT
Ten joules. (beat) Clear.

A small jolt. And then, in Curtis Lemieux's chest, a nineteen-year-old's heart begins to beat. Strong. Regular. Ba-dum. Ba-dum.

AMOND
(staring, barely breathing)
It's beating.

ROBERT
(quietly)
Welcome home. (beat) Note the time, please.

CIRCULATING NURSE
Two forty-one p.m.

Robert looks across the table at Amond. Amond is looking at the heart. His eyes above his mask are wet. He would deny it under oath.

24 EXT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - ROOFTOP - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 3:00 PM

The roof. The East River below, Manhattan beyond: the Chrysler Building, the Empire State, the U.N. The wind pushes the steam from the HVAC units sideways. Esther stands at the railing in her scrubs, arms wrapped around herself. The door opens. Marc.

MARC
(coming over, smiling)
Ten minutes. I told Elxa I was getting coffee. (beat) Okay. I'm here. I'm sober. I've had one cup of coffee and no Hennessy. (beat) Tell me.

Esther turns to him. She's been rehearsing all day. All the words go out of her head.

ESTHER
(beat)
Marc. In Boston. Last year.
Before I came here. I...

Marc's pager goes off. Then again. Then again: the triple page. He looks down.

MARC
(reading)
"911. PICU. Batiste. Cummings."
(beat) It's the hurricane kid.
The DKA. (looking up, torn)
Esther...

ESTHER
(beat)
Go.

MARC
I'll come right back. I swear.
Hold that thought, okay? Whatever it is. Hold it.

He kisses her forehead, fast, and runs for the door. It bangs shut behind him.

Esther stands alone on the roof. The wind. The river. The city.

ESTHER
(to nobody, to the wind, barely audible)
I'm married.

The words disappear over the East River. Nobody hears them.

25 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - PEDIATRIC ICU - BED 2 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 3:03 PM

Dorian on the bed, his eyes rolling, his breathing irregular, his heart rate dropping: 58 on the monitor. Arianna at his head, bagging him. Gloria, a PICU NURSE and DR. ISAIAH CRUMP (61), bow tie askew, running in. Rochelle screams in the corner.

ARIANNA
(fast)
He complained of a headache at two-fifty. Then he got confused, then bradycardic. Pupils are sluggish. His corrected sodium isn't rising. (beat) Cerebral edema.

CRUMP
(arriving)
Mannitol. One gram per kilo. Now. Raise the head of the bed thirty degrees. Cut the fluids by a third.

Marc bursts in.

MARC
What do you need?

CRUMP
(not looking up)
Hands. Get the mannitol in. (beat) Dr. Cummings, keep bagging. Not too hard. We don't want him blown off.

Marc pushes the mannitol through the IV. They work. The monitor: 56. 54. Then 60. 68. 74. Dorian's eyes flutter.

CRUMP
(exhaling)
There you are, young man.

Dorian blinks. Looks up at Arianna.

DORIAN
(groggy)
Did you find him?

Arianna laughs, a shaky, wet laugh, and keeps bagging.

ARIANNA
Not yet, Dorian. Not yet. (beat) Stay with me.

CRUMP
(to Arianna, quietly)
You caught that early, Dr. Cummings. Cerebral edema kills about a quarter of the children who get it. Most interns would have given him Tylenol for the headache.

ARIANNA
(not looking away from Dorian)
He told me it was the worst headache of his life. (beat) Kids don't lie about that.

26 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - SURGICAL FLOOR - ROOM 612 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 3:44 PM

Marc and Harmony walk past the door and stop. Danielle Pryor-Hollis sits on the bed in street clothes, a headscarf ready in her lap, waiting for her oncology appointment. Kevin is beside her. She waves them in.

DANIELLE
My favorite doctors. (beat) Nodes negative. All of them. Receptors: triple negative, like Dr. Lowery said. I start chemo Monday. Four rounds of AC, then Taxol. (beat) And I bought a wig. It's terrible. Kevin likes it.

KEVIN
It's a great wig.

DANIELLE
(taking an envelope from her bag)
And this.

She hands Marc a photo. Danielle and Kevin on the steps of Queens Borough Hall. Kevin in a suit. Danielle in a white dress with a cardigan over her surgical binder, holding up a certificate.

DANIELLE
September first. Legal. A clerk named Ms. Fuentes cried.

(looking at the photo, smiling)
You did it.

DANIELLE
(beat)
We did it. (beat) You moved a Rosary group, Dr. Bullock. Nobody's ever moved a Rosary group for me.

Harmony glances at Marc. He's smiling at the photo the way he smiles at everything: wide open, no armor. She looks away.

27 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - CHIEF'S OFFICE - DAY

Natasha at her desk with a credentialing file. FRANKLIN BASSETT (46) stands across from her.

BASSETT
Hartwell's privileges are approved. Temporary, pending the full committee in October. Medical school at Harvard, residency at the Brigham, fellowship in Leuven with Deprest, thirty-one laser cases. Malpractice clean. (beat) Contract's for three years. He wanted four.

NATASHA
He'll get four if he saves those twins.

BASSETT
(flipping a page)
Emergency contact: spouse, Dr. E. Hartwell. Married August 2004. Oak Bluffs. (beat) No address listed for her. Just a cell phone.

NATASHA
(signing)
Is she relocating with him? Does she need a job? I can call Columbia.

BASSETT
He didn't say.

NATASHA
(closing the file)
Find out. Doctors with unhappy spouses don't sign second contracts. (beat) What time does he land?

BASSETT
(checking his watch)
About twenty minutes ago.

28 INT. JFK AIRPORT - TERMINAL 6 - ARRIVALS - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 4:24 PM

A JetBlue arrivals hall. A stream of travelers. Among them, impossible to miss: DR. CLAYTON HARTWELL (34), in a perfectly cut navy blazer, an open collar, a leather weekender over his shoulder. Tall, handsome, at ease in every room he's ever walked into. Old Boston money in the walk.

He takes out his phone and dials. It rings. Rings. Voicemail: "This is Esther. Leave a message."

CLAYTON
(into the phone, easy, warm)
Es. I'm here. JFK. (beat) I know you said "we need to talk." So let's talk. In person. (beat) I've got some news. I think you're going to be surprised.

He hangs up and walks out to the taxi line. A YELLOW CAB pulls up. He gets in.

CAB DRIVER
Where to?

CLAYTON
(settling back, smiling)
Queens Grace Hospital. Long Island City.

The cab pulls away into the afternoon traffic on the Van Wyck.

END OF ACT THREE

ACT FOUR

29 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - ON-CALL ROOM 2 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 4:38 PM

Arianna pushes the door open, looking for a bunk, and stops. Amond is curled on his side on the bottom bunk, still in his OR scrubs, his knees pulled up, his fist pressed into his right side. He sits up fast when he sees her.

AMOND
(sharp) Knock.

ARIANNA
(not leaving)
You're green, Baker.

AMOND
I've been in an OR for six hours. Everybody's green.

ARIANNA
(shutting the door)
You've been holding your right side since six this morning. I watched you at the Board. (beat) Right lower quadrant. Is it your appendix?

AMOND
(beat)
It's not my appendix.

ARIANNA
How do you know?

AMOND
(beat, flat)
Because I had an ultrasound on Tuesday. At a clinic in Forest Hills. Under a fake name. (beat) It's not my appendix.

Arianna stares at him.

ARIANNA
Then what is it?

AMOND
(lying back down)
They want more imaging. I'm going Monday. (beat) And you're not going to tell anybody. Not Bullock. Not Dr. Bullock. Not Elxa. Nobody.

ARIANNA
(beat)
Baker...

AMOND
I just carried a heart across the Verrazano, Cummings. I released the cross-clamp. I'm not going to be the intern who got pulled off the transplant service in his first year because his stomach hurts.

Arianna looks at him for a long moment. Then she sits on the other bunk.

ARIANNA
(sighing)
I'm collecting everybody's secrets this year. I need a bigger drawer. (beat) Monday. And if you get a fever, or you can't stand up straight, I'm telling the Chief myself.

AMOND
(eyes closed)
Deal.

ARIANNA
(beat)
Congratulations on your heart, by the way.

AMOND
(beat)
It's not my heart. (beat) It's Denise's son's.

30 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - LABOR AND DELIVERY - ROOM 3 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 4:52 PM

Yolanda's monitor shows two tiny heartbeats. Natasha studies the ultrasound. Esther holds the probe, her phone buzzing again in her pocket. She ignores it.

NATASHA
(frowning at the screen)
The recipient's got a pericardial effusion now. Small. (beat) He's heading toward hydrops. We can't wait until tomorrow.

DARNELL
How long until the doctor gets here?

NATASHA
(checking her BlackBerry)
He's in a cab on the Van Wyck. Thirty minutes. Maybe forty, at rush hour. (to Esther) I want the fetoscopy suite set up for seven-thirty. Call anesthesia. And call the NICU, just in case.

ESTHER
(beat, setting down the probe)
Dr. Donohue.

NATASHA
Yes?

ESTHER
(very steady)
What's his name? The fetal surgeon.

Natasha looks up, mildly surprised that she didn't already know.

NATASHA
Hartwell. Dr. Clayton Hartwell. (beat) Have you heard of him? He was at the Brigham.

The color leaves Esther's face. All of it. Natasha sees it this time.

ESTHER
(barely)
Yes. I've heard of him.

NATASHA
(slowly)
Dr. Smilley?

Natasha's BlackBerry buzzes. She glances at it: the Governor's office again. When she looks back up, Esther is already walking out the door.

NATASHA
(calling after her)
Dr. Smilley!

YOLANDA
(to Natasha, quietly)
That's the man.

Natasha looks at Yolanda. Then at the empty doorway.

31 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - STAIRWELL B - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 4:58 PM

Esther takes the stairs two at a time, her hand over her mouth, and runs straight into Harmony coming up. Harmony catches her by the arms.

HARMONY
Esther. Whoa. What's wrong? What happened?

Esther tries to speak and can't. She sits down hard on the stairs. Harmony sits beside her.

HARMONY
(alarmed)
Is it Marc? Is he...

ESTHER
(shaking her head)
It's me. (beat) It's... Harmony. I'm married.

Silence. Total silence.

HARMONY
(beat)
What?

ESTHER
(fast, breaking)
His name is Clayton. We got married on Martha's Vineyard last August. In February I walked in on him in our bed with his best friend. I left that night. I came to New York and bought a boat and never called him back. (beat) And the Chief just hired him. He's in a cab on the Van Wyck right now. He's going to be here in thirty minutes, and Marc doesn't know. (beat) I tried. I tried all day. On the roof, he got paged. I said it out loud to the river, Harmony. The river knows and Marc doesn't.

Harmony stares at her. Her hand goes to her pocket. The letter. Then she takes it away.

HARMONY
(quiet)
The ring. On the chain.

ESTHER
(nodding, crying)
I took it off ten days ago. The night he told me about his... (she stops herself) The night he told me something true about himself. (beat) He told me the truth sober, Harmony. Because I asked him to. And I couldn't do the same for him.

Harmony looks at Esther for a long moment. Something hard and painful moves through her face. And then it settles into something else.

HARMONY
(standing up, holding out her hand)
Then get up.

ESTHER
What?

HARMONY
Get up, Esther. (beat) He thinks you're the one person in his life who never lied to him. (beat) You've got thirty minutes. Go find him before the cab does.

Esther takes her hand. Harmony pulls her up.

ESTHER
(beat)
Why are you helping me?

HARMONY
(beat, the truest thing she's ever said)
Because I want him to be happy. Even if it's with you.

Esther looks at her and, for the first time, understands. Harmony turns away before Esther can say anything.

HARMONY
(over her shoulder)
He was in the PICU. Go.

32 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - PEDIATRIC ICU - FAMILY ALCOVE - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 5:06 PM

Marc stands in the alcove on his cell phone, looking through the glass at Dorian, who's sleeping. Arianna is back at his bedside with the laptop.

MARC
...insulin, test strips, glucagon, all of it. Every child in the five boroughs who came up from the Gulf without their medicine. And the clinics that'll see them without records. (beat) I know the Foundation already committed. I saw the number this morning. Five hundred million.

VICTOR (V.O.)
(on the phone, seventy-two, warm, amused)
You've never asked me for money, Marc-Anthony. Not once. Not for a car. Not for that house.

MARC
I'm not asking for me, Granddaddy. (beat) There's an eight-year-old in this unit who almost died today because his insulin floated away in Gentilly and nobody in New York would write him a prescription without a chart that's under eight feet of water. (beat) Make it a billion.

A pause on the line.

VICTOR (V.O.)
(beat)
Done. (beat) I'll have Bassett's counterpart at the Foundation call your mother by six. Pediatric chronic disease, Gulf evacuees, no records required. (beat) Anything else?

MARC
(beat, quieter)
The boy has a dog. Beignet. Brown, with a white star on his chest. The Louisiana SPCA has a shelter in Gonzales.

VICTOR (V.O.)
(laughing)
Now you're asking. (beat) I'll find you the dog.

MARC
(smiling)
Thank you.

VICTOR (V.O.)
(beat)
I hear you told the Boston girl.

MARC
(beat)
Ten days ago. (beat) She's trying to tell me something today. About Boston. She keeps getting interrupted.

VICTOR (V.O.)
(beat, gently)
Then stop letting her get interrupted. (beat) And Marc? Whatever it is, remember you chose her. Choosing doesn't stop when the news gets bad. That's when it starts.

Marc nods to the empty air. Through the glass, Arianna looks up and gives him a thumbs-up over the laptop.

MARC
I love you, Granddaddy.

VICTOR (V.O.)
Go find your girl.

33 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - SURGICAL RECOVERY - CORRIDOR - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 5:24 PM

Leonard comes out of Vivian's bay with his suit jacket over his arm. Raven is waiting for him in the hallway.

RAVEN
(stepping forward)
Mr. Cole. (beat) This morning. When you asked me if she was alone. (beat) I lied to you. I knew. I'm sorry.

LEONARD
(stopping, looking at her)
I know you did, Doctor.

RAVEN
(beat)
You knew?

LEONARD
(a tired smile)
Your eyes went to the other bed. (beat) You were being kind. To her. (beat) Kind isn't the same thing as honest, Dr. Ellison. But I don't hold it against you. You're young. (beat) It's the grown folks I'm worried about.

RAVEN
Are you going to leave her?

LEONARD
(putting on his jacket)
I'm going home to feed the dog. (beat) Tomorrow I'll decide the rest. Eleven years deserves one night of thinking. (beat) Maybe two.

He walks toward the elevators. Raven watches him go.

RAVEN
(to herself)
Grown folks.

34 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - JACKSON AVENUE ENTRANCE - LOBBY - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 5:58 PM

The revolving door turns. Clayton Hartwell walks in with his weekender, looking up at the lobby with frank, professional appreciation. He goes to the security desk, where Big Ray (45) sits like a mountain behind a monitor.

CLAYTON
(smooth)
Good evening. Dr. Clayton Hartwell. I'm here to see Dr. Natasha Donohue. She's expecting me.

BIG RAY
(checking a list)
Yes, sir. Dr. Hartwell. Fetal surgery. (handing him a temporary badge) Twelfth floor, administration. Bernie will meet you at the elevator.

CLAYTON
(clipping on the badge)
Thank you. (beat, casually) Also, my wife works here. Surgical intern. Would you happen to know if she's on tonight?

BIG RAY
(pen poised)
Name?

CLAYTON
(smiling)
Esther. She goes by Smilley.

Big Ray's pen stops. A beat. He looks up at Clayton very slowly.

BIG RAY
(carefully neutral)
Dr. Smilley.

CLAYTON
You know her?

BIG RAY
(beat)
Everybody knows Dr. Smilley, sir.

CLAYTON
(pleased)
That sounds like her. (beat)
Don't tell her I'm here, would you? She doesn't know I'm here yet. I'd like it to be a surprise.

He walks to the elevators. Big Ray watches him go. Then he picks up the desk phone and dials an extension from memory.

BIG RAY
Bernie. It's Ray. (beat) The Boston doctor is on his way up. (beat) Tell the Chief he says he's Dr. Smilley's husband.

35 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - CHIEF'S OFFICE - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:04 PM

Bernie opens the door. Her face is very carefully blank. Natasha stands behind her desk, very carefully blank too. She has had exactly ninety seconds to absorb what Big Ray told Bernie.

BERNIE
Dr. Hartwell, Dr. Donohue.

Clayton comes in, hand out, all warmth.

CLAYTON
Dr. Donohue. It's an honor. I've read every paper you ever wrote on placenta accreta. Your 1996 paper changed how we do cesarean hysterectomy at the Brigham.

NATASHA
(shaking his hand)
Dr. Hartwell. Welcome to Queens Grace. (beat) Your patient is in L&D, Room 3. Stage III, worsening. The recipient has a new pericardial effusion. I've booked the fetoscopy suite for seven-thirty.

CLAYTON
(immediately serious)
Then I'll scrub at seven. Who's the intern?

NATASHA
(beat)
Dr. Smilley.

Clayton smiles. A small, private, delighted smile.

CLAYTON
(lightly)
Of course she is. (beat) I should tell you, Dr. Donohue, since you'll hear it anyway: Esther Smilley is my wife. We've been... apart. Since February. Things were said. (beat) But she's my wife. And I'd like a chance to fix it. (beat) It's part of why I said yes to you instead of Columbia.

Natasha sits down slowly. Her face is still blank. Her hands are flat on the desk.

NATASHA
(very evenly)
Your wife.

CLAYTON
(nodding)
Thirteen months. (beat) Is that going to be a problem?

Natasha thinks of the form on her blotter this morning. Policy 4.12. Marital status. Her son's face in this office at six-twenty, saying "She's going to. Today."

NATASHA
(beat)
I'll let you know, Dr. Hartwell.

END OF ACT FOUR

ACT FIVE

36 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - CHIEF'S OUTER OFFICE - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:09 PM

Clayton has gone to L&D. Natasha comes out of her office fast, her BlackBerry already at her ear. Bernie stands.

NATASHA
(into the phone)
Marc. It's your mother. Call me the minute you get this. (beat) The minute.

She hangs up and dials again. Voicemail. She hangs up.

NATASHA
(to Bernie)
Page my son. 911. (beat) And Bernie? If Dr. Smilley's on the floor, page her too.

BERNIE
(dialing)
Which one first?

NATASHA
(beat)
Him.

Natasha stands in the outer office, one hand on the back of Bernie's chair. All the power of the Chief's office, and there is nothing she can do about this.

NATASHA
(quiet)
I hired him. (beat) I hired him myself, Bernie.

37 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - LABOR AND DELIVERY - ROOM 3 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:18 PM

Clayton sits on a rolling stool beside Yolanda's bed, the ultrasound probe in his hand, Darnell beside him. He's extraordinary: gentle, precise, funny, completely present.

CLAYTON
(pointing at the screen)
See the line between them? That's the membrane. Your daughter's on this side, your son's on that side. (beat) Tonight I'm going to put a scope the width of a coffee stirrer into your belly, find the vessels where they're trading blood unfairly and close them with a laser. It's like rerouting traffic.

YOLANDA
(holding Darnell's hand)
And they'll both live?

CLAYTON
(honest)
The odds that at least one of them lives are about three in four. Both, a little better than half. (beat) I've done this thirty-one times. I've cried about four of them. I'd like this to not be the fifth.

DARNELL
(beat)
Okay, Doc. (beat) Okay.

The door opens. Esther, out of breath from the stairs. She stops dead in the doorway.

Clayton looks up. For one second the polish falls away and he just looks at her, a man seeing his wife after seven months.

CLAYTON
(softly)
Hello, Es.

Yolanda and Darnell look between the two of them. Yolanda squeezes her husband's hand very hard.

ESTHER
(professional, frozen)
Dr. Hartwell. The fetoscopy suite is set for seven-thirty. Anesthesia's confirmed. NICU's on standby.

CLAYTON
(rising, setting down the probe)
Thank you, Dr. Smilley. (to the Prices) Excuse us one moment.

He steps into the hall. Esther follows, because she has to.

38 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - LABOR AND DELIVERY - HALLWAY - CONTINUOUS
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:21 PM

ESTHER
(low, furious, shaking)
Columbia. You said Columbia.

CLAYTON
Columbia offered. Your Chief offered more: a program of my own. (beat) And you were here.

ESTHER
You don't get to follow me to New York, Clayton.

CLAYTON
(calm)
I didn't follow you, Es. I was recruited. (beat) The following part is a bonus.

ESTHER
(fierce)
You were in our bed. With Malcolm. In OUR bed.

A nurse walks past. They both go silent until she's gone.

CLAYTON
(quieter)
I know what I did. I have spent seven months knowing what I did. (beat) You never let me say I'm sorry. You got on a train. You bought a boat. You changed your phone number twice. (beat) We're still married, Esther. You never filed anything. (beat) I came to say I'm sorry. In person. I'm owed that much, and so are you.

Esther stares at him. She has nothing left.

ESTHER
(barely)
I have to go. (beat) I have to find somebody.

CLAYTON
(beat, studying her face)
Somebody.

She walks away fast. Clayton watches her go. The smile is gone from his face entirely.

39 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - PEDIATRIC ICU - BED 2 - DAY
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:33 PM

Dorian sits up, awake, eating Jell-O. Rochelle sits beside him. Arianna, at the foot of the bed, turns the laptop toward him.

ARIANNA
(trying to stay calm)
Dorian. (beat) Lamar-Dixon Expo Center, Gonzales, Louisiana. Intake photo posted at four-fifty today. (beat) Is that him?

On the screen: a skinny, wet, muddy brown dog in a wire crate, looking at the camera. On his chest, unmistakable: a white star.

Dorian drops the Jell-O. He stares. He puts his hand flat on the screen.

DORIAN
(whispering)
Beignet.

Rochelle bursts into tears. Arianna puts her hand over her mouth. Marc comes in behind them, reading his pager, sees the screen and stops.

MARC
(quietly)
They found him?

ARIANNA
(not taking her eyes off Dorian)
Somebody called the shelter at five-fifteen. A man from a foundation. They pulled him off the line and photographed him and put him on a list for transport to New York. (beat) I didn't do anything. I just kept refreshing.

Marc's pager goes off. He looks at it. Then again. "911 - CHIEF." He frowns.

ARIANNA
(looking at him over Dorian's head)
A man from a foundation, huh?

MARC
(pocketing the pager, deadpan)
Big country. Lots of foundations.

ARIANNA
(deadpan)
Mm-hm. (beat) You're getting paged, Common Name.

MARC
(already backing out)
It's my mother. It's always my mother. (beat) Have you seen Esther?

ARIANNA
(beat)
Harmony was looking for you. She said Esther was looking for you. (beat) Everybody's looking for you, Bullock.

He's gone. Thirty seconds later, Natasha rounds the corner of the PICU, out of breath for the first time in twenty years, and stops at the nurses' station.

NATASHA
Dr. Bullock. Where is he?

PICU NURSE
He just left, Chief. Toward the surgical floor.

40 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - CARDIAC CARE UNIT - BED 6 - NIGHT
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:41 PM

Curtis, intubated and sedated, a new heart beating steadily on the monitor. Ninety-two. Regular. Amond stands by the bed in a fresh scrub top. Robert comes in beside him and looks at the monitor.

ROBERT
Ninety-two and regular. No inotropes. (beat) That's a beautiful heart, Dr. Baker.

AMOND
It's a beautiful heart.

A beat. Robert doesn't look at him.

ROBERT
(quietly)
You were sweating in the car. You held your side in the scrub room at Staten Island. You thought I'd gone ahead.

Amond goes still.

ROBERT
(still looking at the monitor)
I don't need to know tonight. (beat) But you'll be seen by somebody before Monday. Not under a fake name. Not in Forest Hills.

AMOND
(stunned)
How did you...

ROBERT
(beat)
I was an intern once, Dr. Baker. I hid a kidney stone for nine days in 1982. (beat) Tomorrow. Or I tell my wife, and she tells everybody.

AMOND
(beat) Tomorrow.

ROBERT
Good. (beat) And Dr. Baker? (he finally looks at him) Today you carried a heart across a bridge and released the clamp. (beat) Some surgeons go their whole careers without a day like this. Don't you dare waste the next one on pride.

Robert leaves. Amond stands by the bed with his hand pressed to his side, watching the beautiful heart beat.

41 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - INTERNS' LOCKER ROOM - NIGHT
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:48 PM

Harmony sits on the bench in front of her open locker. She takes the folded letter out of her pocket. "Dear Marc." She unfolds it. Reads the first line one more time.

Raven comes in and sees her. Raven sits down on the bench beside her without a word.

RAVEN
(quiet)
I know. (beat) I've known since July. Since the day you moved in.

HARMONY
Don't.

RAVEN
I'm not going to say anything. (beat) I'm just going to sit here.

Harmony folds the letter back up. She puts it in the very back of her locker, behind her church shoes, and closes the door.

HARMONY
(beat)
Something bad's about to happen to him, Rave. And I helped it get there faster.

RAVEN
(beat)
Then you'll be there after. (beat) That's what we do. We're there after.

Harmony leans her head on Raven's shoulder.

END OF ACT FIVE

TAG

42 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - VARIOUS - NIGHT
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 6:55 PM

MARC (V.O.)
Every lie is a loan.

Leonard Cole, alone in his car in the hospital garage, hands on the wheel, not turning the key.

MARC (V.O.)
Some we take out to protect the people we love.

Dorian asleep with the laptop open on his tray table, the dog with the white star on the screen. Arianna gently closes it.

MARC (V.O.)
Some we take out to protect ourselves.

Amond in the CCU, sliding slowly down the wall into a chair, his fist in his side, eyes on Curtis's monitor.

Elxa in the residents' lounge, her hand on her belly, waiting. Russell's text on her phone: "home in 20. oxtails. love u."

MARC (V.O.)
And some we don't even know we're carrying, until the bill comes due.

Natasha, walking fast down the surgical floor corridor, her BlackBerry at her ear. Voicemail again.

43 INT. QUEENS GRACE HOSPITAL - SURGICAL FLOOR - CORRIDOR OUTSIDE L&D - NIGHT
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 2005 - 7:02 PM

Esther comes around the corner from the stairwell, searching. Marc comes around the opposite corner from the PICU, searching. They see each other. They both stop. Relief floods his face.

MARC
(coming to her, smiling)
There you are. I've been looking for you all day. (taking her hands) I'm here. No pager. I turned it off. Nobody's interrupting this time. (beat) What did you need to tell me?

ESTHER
(breathless, her eyes filling)
Marc. I'm so sorry. I should have told you on the boat. I should have told you the night you told me. (beat) In Boston, last year, I...

Behind her, the door to the fetoscopy prep room swings open. Clayton steps out, tying the strings of a surgical cap. He sees Esther. He sees a very tall man holding both her hands. He sees her face.

He stops. Marc looks up over Esther's shoulder, still smiling, friendly, open, the way he is with everybody.

MARC
(letting go of one of her hands and holding it out)
Hi. Sorry. Are you the fetal surgeon from Boston? Marc Bullock. I'm an intern. I heard you're the best in the country.

Clayton looks at the outstretched hand. He doesn't take it. He looks at Esther. Esther closes her eyes.

CLAYTON
(pleasantly)
Clayton Hartwell. (beat) Es?

Esther says nothing. She can't. Marc's smile falters. He looks from her to Clayton and back.

Down the corridor, Natasha rounds the corner and stops dead. Too late.

Clayton looks Marc up and down, slowly. Then he smiles: a beautiful, terrible, Boston smile.

CLAYTON
(calmly)
And you must be the man who's been sleeping with my wife.

Marc's face. Every bit of light goes out of it at once.

Esther's eyes, open now, on Marc. Natasha's hand going to the wall.

SMASH TO BLACK.

Continuity Sheet: Episode 1x09 (Season Finale)

New Canon Established

- THE FINALE REVEAL (7:02 PM, Thursday, September 8, 2005, surgical floor corridor outside L&D;): Dr. Clayton Hartwell to Marc: "And you must be the man who's been sleeping with my wife." Witnesses: Esther and Natasha (arriving too late). Marc learns Esther is married at the same moment we cut to black. This is the counterpart of Addison's line in Grey's 1x09. Season 2 picks up in the same second.
- Esther never got to tell him. On the 3:00 PM roof, Marc was paged away (Dorian) and Esther said "I'm married" to the empty roof. The first person she told was Harmony (4:58 PM, Stairwell B), who sent her to find Marc: "Because I want him to be happy. Even if it's with you." Esther now understands Harmony loves Marc.
- Clayton Hartwell (34) is hired by Natasha as the founding fetal surgeon of QGH's fetal therapy program: a 3-year contract with temporary privileges pending the October committee, Leuven fellowship (Deprest), 31 laser cases. His emergency contact is 'Dr. E. Hartwell' with a cell number only, so Natasha didn't connect it to Smilley. He chose QGH over Columbia partly because Esther is here. He disclosed the marriage to Natasha at 6:04 PM. He and Esther are still legally married; she has never filed. His laser ablation on the Price twins (7:30 PM) went well (per the blog, 9:15 PM). Outcome to be confirmed in 2x01.
- Policy 4.12 (relationship disclosure): Natasha ordered both forms signed by end of shift. The form asks for marital status. Neither form was turned in.
- Curtis Lemieux: orthotopic heart transplant. The donor was a 19-year-old man (motorcycle versus bus, Hylan Boulevard; brain death 4 AM, September 8; tattoo 'DENISE'). The heart was procured at Staten Island University Hospital: cross-clamp 11:34 AM, reperfusion 2:38 PM (3 h 04 min ischemic time), heartbeat at 2:41 PM. Amond carried the heart and released the cross-clamp. Odile is in Houston.
- Amond's secret: right lower quadrant pain since at least September 6. He had an ultrasound under a fake name at a Forest Hills clinic, and it's 'not my appendix.' Arianna and Robert both know. Robert ordered him to be seen 'tomorrow' (9/9). This is the R-4 adaptation of Cristina's pregnancy and ectopic arc; the diagnosis will be set at the Season 2 build.
- Robert will cover Amond's Christmas call so Amond can visit his father's grave (Inglewood Park Cemetery, Section F). Robert hid a kidney stone for nine days as an intern in 1982.
- Howard Divine: his September 6 chest X-ray showed a 6 mm noncalcified right upper lobe nodule (Dr. Kenneth Mabry). A CT is recommended for December 2005. Howard smoked Kools for about 20 years and quit in 1989. Harmony wrote 'CT - DEC' on her palm. This seeds his Season 3 cancer arc (MA-005).
- Harmony's letter now sits at the back of her locker, behind her church shoes. Raven has known since July.
- Raven told Marc she sees his daily lie (the man in a suit with envelopes, 'Yes, sir' calls). She doesn't know what it is. She lied to Leonard Cole and confessed it.

- Victor and Marc: Marc asked his grandfather for money for the first time, for the Foundation's $1B Pediatric Chronic Care Bridge Fund (total Gulf commitment $1.5B). Victor found Beignet the dog. 'Choosing doesn't stop when the news gets bad.'
- Elxa had a 4-month relationship with a resident in 2003, now in Atlanta, and filed the form. 'Everybody in this family has a drawer.'
- Natasha is offering the Governor's office 150 beds for Katrina evacuees this weekend. She wrote a 1996 paper on placenta accreta and cesarean hysterectomy.

New Characters (to add to MA-005 and MA-006)

- Dr. Clayton Hartwell makes his on-screen debut (b. March 3, 1971), per MA-005 C-equivalent of Addison Montgomery.
- Yolanda Price (b. March 30, 1974), a kindergarten teacher; FF Darnell Price (b. June 11, 1972), FDNY Ladder 115 (Long Island City), back from the New Orleans deployment.
- Vivian Cole (b. May 2, 1964), an attorney; Leonard Cole (b. January 20, 1960), an accountant and deacon; Jamal Reid (b. July 12, 1971), an associate at Vivian's firm.
- Dorian Batiste (b. February 15, 1997), Gentilly, New Orleans; Rochelle Batiste (b. August 8, 1966), a home health aide in Cambria Heights, his aunt; Beignet, his dog.
- Dr. Kenneth Mabry (b. February 2, 1950), QGH pulmonologist, recurring through Season 3. Bernadette 'Bernie' Watkins (b. June 6, 1950) appears on screen.

Real-World Accuracy Notes

- Agassi beat Blake 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, 7-6 (8-6) in the 2005 U.S. Open quarterfinal on the night of September 7 into September 8, ending after 1 AM at Arthur Ashe Stadium, which sits in Flushing Meadows, Queens. Blake had beaten Rafael Nadal in the third round. Congress passed $51.8 billion in additional Katrina relief on September 8, 2005. Evacuees moved from the Superdome to the Houston Astrodome on September 1-3. The Louisiana SPCA ran its rescue shelter at Lamar-Dixon Expo Center in Gonzales, and Petfinder hosted Katrina rescue listings. FDNY sent rescue teams to New Orleans, and JetBlue flew Boston to JFK Terminal 6.
- Medicine: in Quintero staging of TTTS, Stage III is critically abnormal Dopplers. Fetoscopic laser ablation (Eurofetus trial, Senat et al., NEJM 2004) gave about 76% survival of at least one twin. Pediatric DKA cerebral edema has about 20-25% mortality and is treated with mannitol 0.5-1 g/kg and head elevation; a failure of corrected sodium to rise is a warning sign. Heart transplant: OPO-coordinated procurement (New York Organ Donor Network), cold ischemic time under 4 hours, defibrillation after reperfusion. A 6 mm nodule in a former smoker warranted CT follow-up in 2005 practice (the Fleischner guidelines were published in November 2005).
